ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First and foremost I would like to thank my God and Savior Jesus Christ for His love and grace which sustains me every day and for allowing me this opportunity and privilege of writing this thesis. Without God and my Lord Jesus Christ I could not have accomplished this. God, I thank you for being my Lord, my friend, and my living wisdom throughout my entire years here at Payap.

I would like to thank my mother and family for all their loving support, patience and understanding during the past 4 years. Knowing I have your support and prayers has kept me going.

I would like to thank my fiancée, Amber, for all her encouragement. I came to Payap for a degree and will leave with a wife as well.

This thesis would not be complete without the help of many Ajarns at Payap. I have learned an invaluable amount through this study and owe my thanks to all my Ajarns.

Particularly I would like to thank Aj. Karen Block, Dr. George Bedell and Dr. Tom Tehan. I would like to thank Aj. Karen for working with me through the analysis and refining out my first draft. Your comments and suggestions were a great help and I couldn't have proceeded to the next step without it. I would like to thank Dr. George Bedell for your willingness to take on this thesis and for making me think further into the text and the language. I would also like to thank Dr. Tom for all your invaluable comments and direction into this thesis.

Also thank you Aj. Art Cooper for providing the texts and many thanks to those Lahu Si speakers in both Thailand and Laos who assisted me in checking the texts throughout the entire process.

I am greatly indebted to SIL for granting me a scholarship so I could complete this study and this thesis. Thank you for investing in me and giving me this opportunity. I would never have developed myself as a linguist without this opportunity.

I would like to thank Gillian, my fellow companion on this thesis journey. Thank you for all your encouragement through the fun times and the rough times. And a special thanks for helping to edit my thesis.

And finally I would like to thank Nid and Noi. Thank you for hanging out, helping relieve the stress and staying up the late hours with me.
