ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Working on this research was a great experience for me as a TEFL student. My great experience owed to a large number of people. I could not be proud of the success of my study without the following people: Dr. Gene Adam greatly guided me through the process of the study, and my special appreciation goes to him for his pleasant father-like advice and encouragement. My special appreciation also goes to Dr. Lamar Robert, from whom I received a great deal of clarification about the research instruments and analysis, for his incomparable patience and kindness all the way through. Acharn Patricia Brown led me not only in an academic aspect but also inspired me through the last minutes of my study, and my special appreciation goes to her unique willingness and understanding.

I would like to thank Dr. Rattanaporn, the Dean of the Graduate School for her encouragement through my study here. My thanks also go to Dr. Pearl Wattanakul, who tried her best to support me in every way she could as a real teacher. My TEFL knowledge owed to all instructors both at the Linguistics Dept. and TEFL Dept. They have enlightened me and opened my world to a much broader view through the process of my study here.

This study could not succeed without great cooperation from administrators, colleagues, parents and students at Nakhorn Payap

International School. My appreciation goes to all my friends at the TEFL Dept. for their friendships and help with the study including supporting staff at the TEFL Dept., Office of the International Affairs, libraries at Payap University, Chiangmai University, and Chulalongkorn University.

I would like to express here my wholehearted appreciation for the scholarship granted by the International Christian Scholarship Foundation. My thanks also go to the administrators of Payap University, especially Mr. & Mrs. John Butt for their great support.

I absolutely appreciate my families both in Bangkok and Chiangmai who have always intimately supported and encouraged me to make my study here possible and enjoyable.
